Mr. William P. Rogers, one of the Principal men in the office of the Wheeling Natural Gas Company in this city, was married Thureday morning to Miss Ida Rinehart, of Sharpeburg, Pa. The Pitts-burgh Commercial-Gazette, in referring to the event which was a very fashionable one, says: "After the usual wedding repast, the happy couple left for a Western tour, mid the shower of rice and good-wishes of wedding guests." The bride is a well-known society lady in this vicinity, and ranks high as a talented and accomplished musician, with a lovely soprano voice." The gentlemen in the office hero and Mr. Rogers' other friends, are anxiously awaiting an opportunity to offer congratulations.

WHERE IT IS LOCATED.

The well is situated on Little Grave creek, on the farm owned by ex-Sheriff J. B. Hicks, and, as before stated, is about one mile from Moundsville, and but a short distance from the camp grounds. The land was leased some time since by Mr. G. S. McFadden, for the Pittsburgh firm of Craig, Cappo & Griffith. At the time the farm was leased considerable other property was also secured. The company gave out at that time that it intended to give the territory a fair trial for both oll and gas. The well in which the oil has been found was started about two months ago. Previous to that time two months ago. Previous to that time two wells had been put down near this spot, but they were almost utter failures, a small amount of gas, not enough to be of any service, being found.

The concert given at the Opera House about one mile from Moundayille and work at the La Belle mill Thursday, by the celebrated Mexican Typical scarcely twelve miles from this city as the claiming to have been terrorized by the Orchestralast evening, was one of the most scarcely twelve miles from this city as the craiming to the previous evening, dur-crow flies. The announcement of this old nallers on the previous evening, dur-first have vesterday, created no little ex. ing a fight that occurred between a repre-given in this city. The audience was a shamefully small one, but one that was wildly enthusiastic. The artists from the sister Republic captured the audience at the very outset, and as each number was played the fortunate few who were present grew more and more delighted. Each selection was listened to with its conclusion a storm of applause was always sure to break forth, several times always sure to break forth, several times not ceasing until an encore had been given. The fact of the audience being so small was partly due, no doubt, to the short announcement that was made of the appearance of this wonderful organization, but if talk from those who were there and the most unstinted praise has any effect, the house will be filled at this afternoon and evening performances.

The orchestra numbers seventeen, and every man is a thorough artist. All but three of the instruments used are stringed ones, and the effect produced is charming; ly fascinating. The artists appeared in their native Mexican garb, wearing on their heads high and broad, silver bound, white sombreros, which were gracefully raised in recognition of the applause that was so liberally showered upon them. The programme was of the very highest order, yet not at all heavy; it was all pure melody; nothing like it was ever heard here before. It was of a nature that cannot be described or imagined, but must be heard in order to understand how sweet it is. It was a concert that has never been surpassed by any given in this city. A noticeable feature was the delicacy of touch and expression that marked each individual's work and the precision and unity of action was wonderful.
